This event is our way of saying Thank You to the First World War generation, as part of the Royal British Legion's "Every One Remembered" campaign

THE ROYAL BRITISH LEGION

About Every One Remembered

The Royal British Legion, as the UK's national custodian of Remembrance, is working with the Commonwealth War Graves Commission to keep alive the memory of those who died in the First World War. By the end of the Centenary in 2018, our objective is to ensure every fallen hero from across the Commonwealth is remembered individually by those living today. This is your chance to take part in a truly historic and incredibly significant act of Remembrance.

It's easy to get involved, whether you already have someone in mind to remember or not. Just search for any name on the homepage and follow a couple of simple steps. You can plant a poppy, write a remembrance message and even upload photos and a story if you have them.

Our Vital Work

If you make a donation to The Royal British Legion after remembering someone, you will receive a special commemorative certificate in the mail.

Your money will help to provide practical and immediate support to serving men and women, veterans and their families affected by today's conflicts, helping people into jobs, into homes and offering them hope for the future.

Other ways to say Thank You...

- Wear a Thank You poppy pin
- Observe a two minute silence
- Visit the war graves of your local fallen
- Scatter poppy seeds in your garden
- Give blood at your local donation centre
- Watch the Festival of Remembrance on 10th November 2018 on the BBC

Did you know:

Daylight saving time was introduced as a wartime measure in 1916. Its intent was to have more light in the evenings to save electricity and is still in use today. Why not dedicate your extra hour to say Thank You, perhaps by planting something in your garden in remembrance.

More than 1.1 million Service men and women gave their lives in the First World War so that future generations could live theirs. Please help The Royal British Legion ensure their sacrifice is never forgotten: find someone to remember and leave a short message to commemorate their life.
